

CENTENNIAL CHRONICLES

#3 September 2020

---

If you have been attending Church or just passing by HT, you will have realized that the installation of the new coverings for the stained-glass windows has now been completed. The results are spectacular, cleaning up the vistas from the exterior immeasurably, and providing a new level of light into the nave inside that show off the colours of the windows themselves in a way probably not experienced for many, many years. The painting of the exterior walls of the building is now underway and will be done before the end of October.

Under the direction of Carol De Boeck, the History group will soon be looking the at church's collection of photographs to identify those that can best be used in a small Centennial exhibit planned for next May, and for a booklet that will also mark our special anniversary. If you have any photos or archival materials that you are prepared to donate as useful additions to the church's legacy record, please be in touch with Francine in the office at 604-531-0884, and arrange to drop them off.

Workmen from Kitsilano Glass removed the old plexi coverings from 13 stained-glass windows before installing new specially laminated glass to protect the windows and let in maximum light from outside.
